Complaints Filed

NASD issued the following complaints. Issuance of a disciplinary complaint represents the initiation of a formal proceeding by NASD in which findings as to the allegations in the complaint have not been made, and does not represent a decision as to any of the allegations contained in the complaint. Because these complaints are unadjudicated, you may wish to contact the respondents before drawing any conclusions regarding the allegations in the complaint.

Dean Russel Baker (CRD #4493790, Registered Representative, Coral Springs, Florida) was named as a respondent in an NASD complaint alleging that he engaged in a pattern of cold calling public customers in an attempt to induce them to open accounts and purchase shares through an online auction of company stock. The complaint alleges that Baker knowingly or recklessly made baseless price predictions and omissions of material facts to his customers and did not inform them of certain conflicts of interest. The complaint also alleged that Baker effected transactions in customers' accounts without their prior authorization, knowledge or consent. (NASD Case # E072004052202)

Mark Vernon Brown (CRD #2233771, Registered Representative, New Port Richey, Florida) was named as a respondent in an NASD complaint alleging that he forged public customers' signatures on letters that authorized the transfer of funds to pre-existing annuities the customers owned, and forged a customer's signature on an annuity application. The complaint alleged that Brown executed transactions in customers' accounts without their prior knowledge or authorization. The complaint also alleges that Brown falsely represented to his member firm that the source of the funds for the additional investments into the pre-existing variable annuities of customers was from a money market fund, without disclosing that these funds initially came from 1035 exchange distributions from pre-existing annuities. In addition, the complaint alleges that Brown acted with scienter in connection with the transactions in the accounts in that he knew that he forged their signatures on various documents, executed unauthorized trades, that the accounts had lower values than what he was representing, and that the customers were incurring surrender charges in connection with the distributions from their annuities or, at a minimum, he was recklessly indifferent to whether the customers knew that he was forging their signatures, executing unauthorized trades in their accounts, that he misrepresented the true values of their accounts and that they were incurring charges in connection with the distributions. The complaint further alleges that Brown recommended that customers liquidate portions of variable annuities held in their accounts and used the proceeds from those sales to purchase additional shares of other variable annuities without having a reasonable basis for his recommendations and resultant transactions. Moreover, the complaint alleges that Brown failed to comply with an NASD request to provide sworn testimony. (NASD Case #2005000931301)

Greater Metropolitan Investment Services, Inc. (CRD #17452, Bedminster, New Jersey) and James Thomas Patten (CRD #1143818, Registered Principal, Bernardsville, New Jersey) were named as respondents in an NASD complaint alleging that they entered matching and crossing trades between sellers and buyers, each of which was the firm's customer, in order to artificially and arbitrarily raise the price of a security. The complaint also alleges that the firm and Patten, directly or indirectly, by use of means or instrumentalities of interstate commerce, intentionally or recklessly employed a device, scheme or artifice to defraud or engaged in an act, practice or course of business that operated or would operate as a fraud or deceit in connection with the purchase or sale of a security. The complaint further alleges that the firm and Patten published or circulated communications which purported to report transactions in a security when they did not believe, or had no reasonable basis to believe, that the transactions were bona fide securities purchases or sales. In addition, the complaint alleges that the firm and Patten improperly marked customer buy and sell order tickets as unsolicited orders when in fact they had solicited the customers to buy or sell the securities. Moreover, the complaint alleges that the firm and Patten countenanced a supervisory system that, in practice, did not apply or monitor procedures with regard to Patten's trading activities and thereby failed to establish, maintain or enforce a system to supervise the activities of each representative and associated person reasonably designed to achieve compliance with applicable securities laws, regulations and NASD rules. Furthermore, the complaint alleges that the firm failed to establish, maintain and enforce written procedures reasonably designed to achieve compliance with anti-fraud and recordkeeping provisions of securities laws, regulations and NASD rules. The complaint further alleges that the firm failed to reasonably supervise Patten's trading activity in the security and his improper marking of order tickets as unsolicited. (NASD Case #2005000245601)

Adam Chamroeurn Heng (CRD #2831137, Registered Representative, Brooklyn, New York) was named as a respondent in an NASD complaint alleging that he executed unauthorized trades, used margin without customers' knowledge or authorization, and failed to follow customer instructions to close customers' accounts. The complaint also alleges that Heng acted with scienter in connection with the unauthorized trading in the customer's accounts in that he knew the trading at issue was conducted without authorization or, at a minimum, he was recklessly indifferent to whether the customers had authorized the trades and knew he engaged in a pattern of unauthorized trading. The complaint further alleges that Heng failed to comply with an NASD request to appear and complete an on-the-record testimony. (NASD Case #E072004051101)

Brian James Kelly (CRD #2270427, Registered Representative, Severna Park, Maryland) was named as a respondent in an NASD complaint alleging that he exercised effective control over a public customer's personal account and recommended stock transactions for the account that were excessive and effected using an excessive margin amount. The complaint also alleges that Kelly, directly or indirectly, by use of any means or instrumentalities of interstate commerce or of the mails, knowingly or recklessly used or employed, in connection with the purchase or sale of securities, manipulative or deceptive devices or contrivances; and knowingly or recklessly effected transactions in, or induced the purchase or sale of, securities by means of manipulative, deceptive or other fraudulent devices or contrivances. The complaint further alleges that Kelly engaged in short-term, frequent securities purchases and sales in a public customer's personal account without a reasonable basis for believing that the transactions were suitable for the customer based on the frequency of the transactions, the nature of the customer's account, and his financial situation and needs, and effected transactions through the excessive use of margin which was unsuitable for the customer. In addition, the complaint alleges that Kelly exercised discretion in the customer's account without his member firm's prior written acceptance of the account as discretionary, and misled his firm that he had exercised discretion by falsely answering compliance-related questionnaires. (NASD Case #E9A2004048801)

William Andrew Malloy (CRD #1492864, Registered Principal, Matthews, North Carolina) was named as a respondent in an NASD complaint alleging that he engaged in securities transactions without providing written notification to his member firm. The complaint also alleges that Malloy entered into an agreement with a public customer to receive a portion of the profits from trading in the customer's account, therefore he directly or indirectly impermissibly shared the profits of a customer's account without obtaining prior written authorization from his member firm to accept such compensation, and without making any financial contribution to the customer's account. The complaint further alleges that Malloy engaged in excessive trading and churning in the public customer's account. In addition, the complaint alleges that Malloy, by the use of any means or instrumentality of interstate commerce or of the mails, intentionally or recklessly engaged in manipulative or deceptive devices or contrivances in connection with the purchase or sale of securities, and intentionally or recklessly effected transactions in, or induced the purchase or sale of, securities by means of manipulative, deceptive or other fraudulent devices or contrivances. Moreover, the complaint alleges that Malloy settled a customer complaint without his member firm's knowledge or consent and failed to respond to NASD requests for information. (NASD Case #ELI2004008101)

Richard James Morgan (CRD #3056196, Registered Representative, Missouri City, Texas) was named as a respondent in an NASD complaint alleging that he failed to respond to NASD requests to appear for an on-the-record interview. The complaint also alleges that Morgan effected stock and option transactions in public customers' accounts without their written authorization to use discretion in their accounts and without his member firm's written acceptance of the accounts as discretionary. The complaint further alleges that Morgan exercised discretion to effect excessive unsuitable stock and option transactions in public customers' accounts. (NASD Case #E0620040265-01)

Jae Young Oh (CRD #4576773, Registered Representative, Los Angeles, California) was named as a respondent in an NASD complaint alleging that he prepared and sent a falsified account statement misrepresenting that it was the actual current account statement to a public customer. The complaint alleges that Oh failed to respond to NASD requests for information. (NASD Case #20050009134-01)

The Truman Group Inc. (CRD #10764, Delray Beach, Florida) Steven Matthew Labadie (CRD #3149829, Registered Representative, Boca Raton, Florida), Robert Sean Paruch, Jr. (CRD #3139293, Registered Representative, Bay Harbor Island, Florida) and Kenneth Jason Saluk (CRD #2470891, Registered Representative, Lighthouse Point, Florida) were named as respondents in an NASD complaint alleging that the firm, acting through Saluk, Labadie and Paruch, offered and sold shares of common stocks to public customers when there was no registration statements filed or in effect with the SEC with respect to the common stocks as required by Section 5 of the Securities Act of 1933, and the stock was not exempt from any registration requirements. The complaint alleged that the firm, acting through Labadie, Paruch and Saluk engaged in acts operating as a fraud or deceit in connection with the purchase or sale of securities. The complaint also alleges that the firm, acting through Saluk, Labadie and Paruch, misused public customers' funds intended to pay for their stock purchases. The complaint also alleges that the firm allowed Saluk, Labadie and Paruch to solicit investors to purchase securities without the benefit of a General Securities Representative registration. The complaint further alleged that the firm allowed Saluk to supervise, solicit and conduct the firm's business, and actively engaged in the management of the firm's securities business without the benefit of a General Securities Principal registration. In addition, the complaint alleged that Saluk failed to comply with an NASD request to appear for on-the-record testimony. (NASD Case #EFL2004000401)

David Lee Steadman (CRD #2371970, Registered Representative, Virginia Beach, Virginia) was named as a respondent in an NASD complaint alleging that Steadman signed public customers' names to documents without their authorization or consent, causing the unauthorized withdrawal of funds and the redemption of a mutual fund. The complaint also alleges that Steadman failed to appear for an NASD on-the-record interview. (NASD Case #2005000613301)

NASD Fines LaSalle Street Securities $200,000 for Supervisory Violations Related to Fraudulent Schemes Perpetrated by Broker Frank Devine

Firm Suspended from Hiring Representatives with a Disciplinary History, Must Retain Independent Consultant to Correct Supervisory System Deficiencies

NASD fined LaSalle Street Securities, Inc. of Elmhurst, IL, $200,000 for failing to adequately supervise Frank Devine, a former representative of the firm who began serving a 13-year prison sentence after pleading guilty to federal wire and tax fraud charges for defrauding investors in a Ponzi scheme. A federal judge also ordered Devine to pay nearly $3 million in restitution to his victims. Earlier this month, an Illinois judge handed Devine a concurrent 15-year state prison sentence in a state criminal case arising from the same misconduct.

Also as part of the action, NASD ordered LaSalle Street to retain an independent consultant to establish adequate supervisory systems and procedures, and suspended the firm from hiring brokers with any disciplinary history until such time as the firm has implemented appropriate supervisory systems.

In related actions, NASD has barred Devine from the securities industry for life for operating fraudulent investment schemes, converting funds and failing to respond to requests for information. It has also barred the LaSalle principal assigned to supervise Devine, Gerald Martin, from serving in any supervisory or principal capacity with any NASD-registered firm. In addition, NASD suspended Martin in all capacities for 90 days and fined him $5,000.

"Devine's misconduct escaped detection in large part because of the firm's deficient supervisory system and procedures," said James Shorris, NASD Executive Vice President and Head of Enforcement. "NASD rules require firms to establish systems and procedures to reasonably supervise brokers, to ensure compliance with securities laws and regulations. And regulators have repeatedly emphasized the need for heightened supervision of brokers with known regulatory problems or customer complaints. But LaSalle Street had no significant supervisory procedures in those areas and never took any steps to meaningfully supervise Devine—and Devine was able to exploit those deficiencies to carry out his fraudulent schemes."

NASD found that in June 1998, when LaSalle Street hired Devine, he disclosed to the firm that NASD was investigating his termination by his previous firm for engaging in unauthorized and undisclosed outside business activities. In September 1998, Devine received formal written notification from NASD that it intended to pursue disciplinary action against him. Despite being aware of the NASD investigation, and knowing that Devine maintained a separate business account and operated various outside businesses, LaSalle Street allowed Devine to work from his home with no on-site supervision.

Following a hearing and several appeals—including to the Securities and Exchange Commission, which took its final action in December 2002—Devine was found to have sold viatical contracts without the knowledge of, or authorization from, his previous employing firm. He was suspended for 90 days, fined $34,825 and required to requalify by examination before he could associate with an NASD-registered firm. Devine served his suspension in early 2003, and then reassociated with LaSalle Street where he continued to work until September 2004. During the entire six-year period that Devine was employed with LaSalle Street, the firm allowed him to work from his home, did not place him under any form of heightened supervision and did not conduct a single inspection of his office. LaSalle Street also failed to properly investigate red flags indicating possible misconduct by Devine. Devine made inconsistent disclosures to the firm about his outside business activities and his separate business account beginning in 1999, which the firm failed to follow up on. Further, Devine's production declined precipitously in 2003 and 2004, when his annual compensation from LaSalle Street plummeted from six figures to under $1,000. When questioned by the firm, Devine told LaSalle Street that he was being paid "very, very well" as a political consultant, but that he could not provide details because he was working for the U.S. Government. LaSalle Street did not investigate further.

NASD found that while LaSalle Street employed Devine, he operated several fraudulent schemes including one involving the purchase and resale of luxury automobiles, one involving the sale of real estate and another involving an initial public offering. Devine converted the funds he collected from friends, acquaintances and others to his own personal use. None of these schemes was approved by LaSalle Street or known by the firm. Devine's supervisor, Martin, invested approximately $80,000 in two of Devine's schemes, but did not inform the firm of his investment and did not determine whether any LaSalle Street customers serviced by Devine had also invested.

In addition to its failure to reasonably supervise Devine, NASD also found that LaSalle Street failed to establish an adequate supervisory system and procedures for supervising activities of brokers working in small, geographically dispersed offices, including brokers with disciplinary histories. Other than having a "goal" of inspecting each non-branch office location once every three years, LaSalle Street did not have procedures for supervising brokers like Devine, who were working in remote office locations. Further, LaSalle Street did not provide supervisors with any formal instruction or training, and there was no supervisory manual or supervisory procedures for managers to follow.

In settling these matters, LaSalle Street, Devine and Martin have neither admitted nor denied the charges, but consented to the entry of NASD's findings.
